The prior art to Aoki (6253218) teaches an image that is enlarged until an image becomes equal to or larger than a predetermined value, which renders the image gradually transparent in view of a plurality of images displayed so as to eliminate the inconvenience of having obscured images. The prior art to Nomura (5877772) teaches displaying the number of images along with the images. The prior art to Dow (6611291) teaches displaying a dummy image. The prior art of record fails to teach wherein when the input images data is recorded in a recording medium that cannot be randomly accessed, the image display control means displays operation keys of a video tape recorder for a user to choose a program.
